

THE NATIONAL CADRES
TRAINED IN DIFFERENT
MARINE ENVIRONMENTAL FIELDS

By MEMAC

INTRODUCTION

During incidents and disasters, there is always the need for Local, Regional or International experts, specialized people and trained cadres who could take accurate decisions and deal with these incidents and disasters successfully. However, the main burden is usually put on the shoulders of national and local cadres who have been trained as it is their commitment to be ready to extend all their experience to assist their individual countries as well as the entire Region as a whole.

Accordingly, MEMAC has prepared this publication which contains the names and contact numbers of cadres who have been trained by MEMAC on different marine environmental fields, including oil spill combating procedures and marine environment protection techniques.

It should be taken into account that all the training courses are continuously updated even if they come under the same title, but their contents are renewed in accordance with the latest scientific, technological development available and lessons learnt from different incidents occurred.

The publication does not contain only the cadres of ROPME Member States, but also cadres from oil companies and the private sector in the Region.

MEMAC asked all of these cadres during the training courses they attended to communicate with MEMAC office whenever they needed any updates with regard to information, scientific data and technology as well as to their contact numbers.

From its side, MEMAC has always been ready to provide the Member States and other relevant institutions and bodies with the latest necessary information and data in order to keep the national cadres armed with updated knowledge and experience, as we consider these cadres as the assets of our Member States.

It is also worth mentioning that so far 26 different courses have been conducted and 1431 cadres were trained during the period of 2002 till 2011, and a number of these cadres have been involved in MEMAC's programmes as Regional experts.

It is noticeable that from year to year, the number of the cadres participated is different as well as the number of the training courses. This is due to the MEMAC programmes which are focused on the need of the training type and level due to the Regional circumstances and the analysis of the different types of incidents that occur regionally or internationally, besides the techniques and technology development.

Conclusions and Results

MEMAC has been convening its different skill of training courses since May 1984, supporting Member States' cadres for 27 years. However, during the last 10 years, MEMAC concentrated on those selected training courses which were tailored to the Region and its requirements. This policy resulted in:

- Forming excellent skills of national cadres who are now carrying out their tasks replacing foreign experts.
- These trained cadres have established many companies in the last few years, covering different oil spills and other related matters and providing services as private sectors.
- In the last decade, it was noticeable that the national cadres became active parts in attending and participating in several Regional and International conferences and meetings.
- Several technical committees have been established regionally to deal with different environmental subjects from the trained cadres.
- The trained cadres have widely expressed their concerns on environment issues in the local and regional press, which in its turn has played a big role in environmental awareness amidst the people of the area.
- Furthermore, the number of articles written by the trained cadres on different environmental issues has tremendously increased for the last two decades.
